Abbeville	SE	E A T	Huggin' Molly	Huggin' Molly is in beautiful downtown Abbeville. It is a large old fashioned drug store with the soda fountain counter at the front, where ice cream goodies and cherry cokes are assembled. The place is loaded with items such as brochures and memorabilia from the 40's and 50's. It has a beautiful pharmacy "front" at the rear of the front entrance, which is a beautiful wood decoration; reminds me of a fancy British pub. There is separate seating area to accommodate lots of patrons. Great music from the era is played.

Albertville	NE	V I N	Jules J. Berta	Jules J. Berta Vineyards are located atop Sand Mountain in Albertville, Alabama. It is owned and operated by Jules J. Berta and wife, Becky Bailey-Berta. The vineyards are five acres of vines on a 22 acre farm. The sandy soil and high elevation create a unique southern climate for growing viniferous grapes. Jules and Becky are dedicated to making quality wines from the viniferous (wine grapes) they grow on their farm. Controlling this aspect of the wine process enables them to ensure quality at each process from vine to bottle. This husband and wife team hope to bring an added excellence to the State of Alabama with their vineyards and wines. Jules and Becky agree there is a spiritual awakening and peace in farming a vineyard.

Alexander City	C	P O I	Horseshoe Bend National Military Park	18 miles east of Alexander City on Alabama 49. On the morning of 27 March, 1814 General Andrew Jackson and an army of 3,300 men consisting of Tennessee militia, United States regulars and both Cherokee and Lower Creek allies attacked Chief Manawa and 1,000 Upper Creek or Red Stick warriors fortified in the "horseshoe" bend of the Tallapoosa River. To seal off the bend of the river, the Upper Creeks built an incredibly strong 400 yard long barricade made of dirt and logs. As the Cherokee and Lower Creek warriors swam the Tallapoosa and attacked from the rear, Jackson launched the militia and regular soldiers against the barricade. Facing overwhelming odds, the Red Sticks fought bravely yet ultimately lost the battle. Over 800 Upper Creeks died at Horseshoe Bend defending their homeland. This was the final battle of the Creek War of 1813-14, which is considered part of the War of 1812. In a peace treaty signed at Ft. Jackson

				(near Wetumpka) after the battle, both the Upper and Lower Creeks were forced to give the United States nearly 20 million acres of land in what is today Alabama and Georgia. The victory here brought Andrew Jackson national attention and helped him to be elected the seventh President of the United States in 1828. This 2,040-acre park preserves the site of the battle. The land ceded by the Creek Indian nation made up three fifths of the land that was to become Alabama. The visitor center has an excellent 20 minute video and exhibits on the battle & Creek Indian culture. The Horseshoe Bend National Military Park is a must see.

				pleasurable escape from modern life. Tannehill Ironworks Historical State Park has more than 1,500 acres in three counties set aside for hiking, camping and outdoor recreation. A miniature railroad chugs through the pines. From spring through fall, the blacksmith, miller and craftsmen demonstrate their trades. Craft shops occupy restored pioneer cabins and artisans chat with visitors from their front porches. Steeped in history, Tannehill feels timeless. The cotton gin, pioneer farm and working gristmill preserve a long-gone way of life. Hiking trails retrace historic roadways. Artifacts of Alabama's 19th century iron industry displayed in the Iron and Steel Museum put in perspective the massive stone furnaces, Tannehill's awe-inspiring centerpiece. rate movie palace for nearly 55 years. Like so many of the great movie palaces, this classic theater needed repair and could no longer afford its overhead. 1987, the owners declared bankruptcy and the theatre was purchased by a non-profit corporation which has turned the classic theater into a performing arts center. The Alabama Theatre for the Performing Arts now showcases live shows and even a few films. In 1998, the Theatre underwent an extensive restoration and has been returned to its former glory.

Birmingham	C	P O I	16 th Street Baptist Church	Sixteenth Street Baptist Church is a large, predominantly African American Baptist church in Birmingham. In September 1963, it was the target of the racially motivated 16th Street Baptist Church bombing that killed four little girls in the midst of the American Civil Rights Movement. The church is still in operation and is a central landmark in the Birmingham Civil Rights District. It was designated as a National Historic Landmark in 2006.

Birmingham	C	P O I	Kelly Ingram Park	 Kelly Ingram Park is a four acre park located in Birmingham, Alabama. It is bounded by 16th and 17th Streets and 5th and 6th Avenues North in the Birmingham Civil Rights District. The park, just outside the doors of the 16th Street Baptist Church, served as a central staging ground for large-scale demonstrations during the American Civil Rights Movement of the 1960s. Reverends Martin Luther King, Jr. and Fred Shuttlesworth of the Southern Christian Leadership Conference directed the organized boycotts and protests of 1963 which centered on Kelly Ingram Park. It was here, during the first week of May 1963, that Birmingham police and firemen, under orders from Public Safety Commissioner Eugene "Bull" Connor, confronted demonstrators, many of them children, first with mass arrests and then with police dogs and fire hoses. Images from those confrontations, broadcast nationwide, spurred a public outcry which turned the nation's attention to the struggle for racial equality. The demonstrations in

Birmingham	C	E A T	Pete's Famous Hot Dogs (1915)	1925 2 nd Ave. North. "All the way" dog. "Birmingham legend, Gus Koutroulakis, has been slinging hot dogs from the same tiny stand in downtown Birmingham, Pete's Famous, since 1948. According to Gus, his Uncle Pete and a buddy bought the place in 1939 with money they won in a Pinochle game. Pete renamed the place after his self-proclaimed famous dogs when he bought out his business partner in 1946. That same year, Pete installed the colorful neon sign that still lights up 2nd Avenue. And Gus still makes his dogs the same way his uncle did: "all the way" with mustard, kraut, and special sauce. Or, you can order a "special," with a beef topping that's—be careful—not chili. The classic sauce is unique to Birmingham and certainly a Greek addition to classic take-away fare. No one's quite sure who came up with it, but variations on that same sauce can be found all over town. A visit to Pete's Famous is quite an experience, so when you visit, spend some time taking in Gus's hot dog wisdom and learning interesting tidbits from loyal customers, while downing a

				casino hidden behind a heavily bolted door. Today there are only a few physical reminders of the cave's glory days: the outline of a fieldstone bar where a jar of thousand-dollar bills once sat on display, the concave area that served as an orchestra pit for swing bands and vocalists. But on the spot where diners once enjoyed $1.10 price-fixed meals and dancers swayed on tile-covered floors under a cathedral ceiling painted to resemble a night sky, only copperheads, spiders, and other creatures take advantage of the once-magnificent room. A sense of eeriness permeates the cavern's damp walls-a sense of stories never to be told, mysteries never to be solved. The cave continues through the mountain, so if you want an adventure, pack a good flashlight and some water. This one will be an adventure.

Childersburg	C	P O I	The oldest continuously occupied settlement in the U S 1540 AD	Not until the arrival of Hernando DeSoto and his Spanish expedition in 1540 A.D. was the beginning of recorded history in Alabama marked. In fact, Childersburg, the city nearest the DeSoto Caverns, is the oldest continuously occupied settlement in the United States, predating St. Augustine by 25 years. The DeSoto expedition spent a little over five weeks in the capital of the Coosa Indians, just a few miles west of the DeSoto Caverns. Their mission was to find gold and to establish the first Spanish colony in the New World. DeSoto left, disappointed, as he found no gold in the surrounding territory and thus did not claim any land for Spain, but instead took slaves from among the Coosa people.

				body of water, Lake Martin. Alabama Power Company began building Martin Dam in 1923. Although the majority of the lake is located in Tallapoosa County, the generating plant was built in Elmore County. The cost of the project was $20 million. The gates were closed on June 9, 1926 and the Tallapoosa River began to fill the small creeks and streams lacing the basin. Former residents watched with anguish as homes and fields which had been in their families for generations flooded. Old Indian sites were covered, burying many Native American artifacts under the rush of the water. At that time, Lake Martin was the world's largest artificial body of water. 4 generators producing 154.2 MW of power.

Double Springs	N W	P O I	Dual Destiny	At the Winston County Court House, a statue of a Civil War soldier flanked by billowing Confederate and Union flags, representing the "Free State of Winston". The Plaque reads: The Civil War was not fought between the north and the south but between the Union and the Confederate armies. Perhaps as many as 300,000 Southerners served in the Union Army. The majority of the Appalachian south from West Virginia to Winston County was pro-union. Winston provided 239 confederate soldiers, 21 of whom shared last names. This Civil War soldier, 1/2 union and 1/2 confederate, symbolizes the war within a war and honors the Winstonians in both armies. Their shiny new swords of 1861 were by 1865 as broken as the spirits of the men who bore them; and their uniforms of blue and gray once fresh and clean, were now as worn and patched as the bodies and souls they contained. Johnny Reb and Billy Yank disillusioned; but the realities of war shared dual destinies as pragmatic Americans in a reunited nation.

Hanceville	N W	P O I	The Shrine of the Most Blessed Sacrament of Our Lady of the Angels Monastery	The Shrine of the Most Blessed Sacrament, located ("in the middle of nowhere") at Our Lady of the Angels Monastery in Hanceville, Alabama, is truly an amazing and awe-inspiring place. Located on 400 acres of lush farmland southeast of Cullman, the medieval-style monastery and the Shrine itself are a wonder one could hardly expect to experience outside of EAT World Europe, much less to find in the rural southeastern United States. In 1995, while visiting the Sanctuary of the Divino Nino Jesus in Bogotá, Columbia, Mother Angelica received a vision while praying before a small statue of the Divine Child Jesus. The statue came to life and said to her: "Build Me a Temple and I will help those who help you." Pilgrimages are available for groups of ten or more and individuals are welcome to join any scheduled activity at the Shrine. Out of respect for the Most Blessed Sacrament, the Nuns request that visitors refrain from wearing shorts, tank tops, sleeveless shirts or mini-skirts. Photographs are not allowed in the Shrine itself, as it may distract the Nuns and pilgrims at adoration.

				Warrior River. The amazing quality of the water in this lake is due to its location downstream of the Bankhead National Forest which filters water flowing into Smith Lake. The lake impounds 21,000 acres. The dam releases clear, cold water from the bottom of the lake. Because of these cold temperatures, the Sipsey Fork downstream of the dam can support introduced rainbow trout, making this section of water one of the only places in Alabama that can support a trout fishery.

LaGrange College is Alabama's first chartered college, established in 1830, and is often referred to as the "WEST POINT OF THE SOUTH" since it was later turned into a Military Academy. The college enrollment read like a "Who's Who" list. By 1862, due to the war, most had enlisted and the village was left virtually deserted. The college was burned April 28, 1863 by Federal Calvary commanded by Colonel Florence M Cornyn under General Granville Dodge.

Today, the purpose of the reconstruction of Fort Mitchell, a National Landmark Site, is to bring to life that period of history that took place in this area during the time of the Federal Road, the Creek Indian War, and the pioneer settlement of this area. As Alabama became a state in 1819, the terms of the Battle of Horseshoe Bend were being carried out. The Federal Government had set up a Trading Factory at Fort Mitchell (1817-1820) to provide the Indians with necessary supplies such as clothing and food items. The factory was not successful and the Government set up an Indian Agency at Fort Mitchell, which remained there from 1825-1836, when the Indians were moved to the West. A Memorial can be seen just north of the forts Visitors Center, at the Indian Heritage Center, which has the names of each of the Indians who were moved to the West printed in the panels of the memorial. At the visitor's center upon your entrance to Fort Mitchell, you will need to check in. The Visitors Center houses the Museum, theatre, and a walk through time, where you will see displays depicting historical scenes and events of the area and time. There are collections of arrowheads, tools, guns, pottery, and household items. In the museum, is a display of period horse drawn carriages which are all original and built in the 1860 era.

Phil Campbell	N W	P O I	Dismals Canyon	On your next visit to NW Alabama, you need to go to the Dismals Canyon. Early settlers gave it the name as it was so forbidden to them. Basically it's a very rugged box canyon. Robbers of the Natchez Trace travelers hid there as well as Aaron Burr before he was captured near Mobile. Also some of the Indians (I forget which tribe, I think Choctaw) were held there in their "relocation" to Okalahoma in the infamous Trail of Tears. It is one amazing area. In fact the History Channel filmed part of "When Dinosaurs Roamed" in the canyon due to its primordial nature. Northern hemlock trees grow there as the temperature stays so much cooler that as the Ice Age receded the trees continued to flourish in the canyon.

Pine Level	SE	E A T	Tin Top Café	For a unique dining experience may I recommend the Tin Top Café? With it's motto of "just good ol' country cookin', it certainly is that and more. Situated on U.S. Hwy 231 south of Montgomery in Pine Level, it is one of those places that touring motorcyclists love to find. It is an old looking building covered in signs from gas stations and country stores. From the moment we walked in, dressed in riding clothes, we were treated like welcomed guests by everyone inside especially the owner, Mr. Robert Missildine. The food was served cafeteria style. The meatloaf was "the best I ever had" and the home cooked vegetables were excellent as was the cornbread. Mr. Missildine came over to our table to ask us if everything was O.K. and could he get us anything else. Even though we though we couldn't possibly want anything else he brought us some chicken fingers with a "killer" sauce. Saying," ya'll try this, it's almost closing time and we'll just throw it out if ya'll don't eat it. Eat it, we did! It would be a sin to throw away something that good anyway.

Wetumpka	SE	D A M	Walter Bouldin Dam Jordan Lake Reservoir	Located NE of Wetumpka on Bouldin Dam Road. Walter Bouldin Dam was the last dam built as part of an Alabama Power project that developed the Coosa River. Bouldin Dam has the largest generating capacity of Alabama Power's 14 hydro facilities. It is unusual in design because it was built on a canal. Some people refer to it as the "plant built in a cornfield."
Wetumpka	SE	E A T	Our Place Cafe	Crab Cakes. For a delectable dinner, the restaurant occupies a brick building once owned by the Graham family. Back in the 1930s, the structure housed a grocery store with an apartment above and later served as an office for the family's wholesale gasoline business. Here you will find casual elegance in dining and an ambience-filled restaurant with two dining levels. The owner describes his cuisine as more "Creole than Cajun".
Whitehouse	N W	C H U	Whitehouse Church of Christ	15011 Highway 278. In the early 1900's when the congregation painted the church white, it became known as the "White House" since it was the only white building in town.
